HONESTY

PARENT LETTER

Hello Parents,

We are learning all about Honesty. We defined being honest as: Saying or doing what is truthful and being straightforward.

Here are some ways you can teach Honesty to your child at home:

If you know they did it, don't ask! If you ask, you're giving them the option to lie. (Ex.- you see spilled juice in front of them, instead of saying "did you spill this juice?" say "looks like you spilled some juice, let's clean it up.")

Teach them to consider the other person's feelings. (Ex.- "I can't play because I'm busy," instead of "I don't like playing with you!") These kinds of lies are "prosocial" because they smooth our interactions with others.

Talk about the honesty of the characters in the books they're reading. What did the character gain by being honest?

Signs of dishonesty: lack of eye contact, defensiveness, long pauses when talking or answering a question, looking downward, nervous behavior like twitching or touching their face.

HONESTY

WRITING PROMPTS

1. What does it mean to be honest? What makes you an honest or dishonest person?
2. Why do people tell lies? Is lying good or bad? Explain.
3. Think of a time when you had a chance to show that you were honest. What happened because of your honesty? How did it make you feel?
4. Is saying nothing the same as telling a lie? (lying by omission) Why or why not?
5. Describe something you did that was not honest. How did it make you feel? What did you learn from that?
6. Are there ever situations where it might be okay to tell a lie? Explain.

MORNING ANNOUNCEMENTS

Week 1: We are learning all about Honesty. We defined being honest as saying or doing what is truthful and being straightforward. Some ways you can be honest at school are following the rules, admitting a mistake, being accountable for your actions, keeping your eyes on your own paper, and making sure your work is your own.

Week 2: We are continuing to learn all about Honesty. Remember being honest means saying or doing what is truthful and being straightforward. Some ways that you can be honest at home are keeping your promises, telling the truth even if it means you might get in trouble, and asking before you borrow from a sibling.

Week 3: We are continuing to learn all about Honesty. Remember being honest means saying or doing what is truthful. Some ways that you can be honest in your community is by returning library books, honoring commitments made to others, not taking something that does not belong to you, and taking lost items to lost & found.

Week 4: As we continue to learn about Honesty, let's reflect on this quote by John Lennon, "Being honest may not get you a lot of friends, but it will always get you the right ones." This means that honesty can be difficult, and it may not be what is always easy and popular, but it will attract the right kind of people to you and those are the kind of people you want in your life. What is one way you will be honest today?

Week 5: Honesty is an essential trait to have for many careers. Doctors for example show a lot of honesty. They are licensed health professionals who maintain and restore their patient's health through the practice of medicine. Doctors must maintain their patient's confidentiality and collect sensitive information. Once they examine results, they are responsible for determining a treatment plan and explaining the procedure and prescribed treatments to their patients in a compassionate and honest way. Think of a career you may be interested in and how you can show honesty within that career.

Week 6: Kindness is also shown by many leaders throughout history and is an important feature of being a leader. One such leader was Abraham Lincoln, the 16th president of the U.S. He was often referred to as "Honest Abe" due to his long career ruled by honesty, truth, and integrity. He earned his nickname when he was working as a young store clerk. Whenever he realized that he shortchanged a customer even by a few pennies, he would close the shop and deliver the correct change, no matter how far he had to walk. Later on, his good name helped win him four consecutive terms in the legislature. He showed us the importance of being an honest leader, he said "I am glad of all the support I can get anywhere, if I can get it without practicing any deception to obtain it." Think about how you can be a leader in your classroom by showing honesty.

They examine patients, review their medical history, diagnose illnesses or injuries, administer treatment, and counsel patients on their health and well-being. Doctors must maintain their patient's confidentiality and collect sensitive information such as exam results. Once they examine the results, they are responsible for determining a treatment plan and explaining the procedure and prescribed treatments to their patients in a compassionate and honest way.

LEADERS WITH

HONESTY

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

Lincoln was the 16th president of the United States. He was often referred to as “Honest Abe” due to his long career ruled by honesty, truth, and integrity. He earned his nickname when he was working as a young store clerk. Whenever he realized that he shortchanged a customer even by a few pennies, he would close the shop and deliver the correct change, no matter how far he had to walk. His honest reputation grew as he was asked to be a judge and mediator in contests and fights. Lincoln’s judgment was final in that region of the country. Later on, his good name helped win him four consecutive terms in the legislature. He showed us the importance of being an honest leader, he said “I am glad of all the support I can get anywhere, if I can get it without practicing any deception to obtain it.”
