GENEROSITY

PARENT LETTER

Hello Parents,

We are learning all about Generosity. We defined generosity as: being kind and giving to others.

Here are some ways you can teach generosity to your child at home:

Demonstrate generosity. Teaching by example is one of the most effective ways to influence behavior. During dinner, ask, "Want a bite of my meal? Let me share it with you."

Volunteer and/or donate to a local charity or local organization.

Discuss other people's wants and needs. When your child says, "I want ice cream!" in the store, you can reply, "That's what you would like, but what do you think your brother would like? What treat should we bring home for him?" This teaches your child to be aware of others' needs, not just their own.

*Keep in mind generosity comes in many forms: Giving money, time, attention, items/things, skills/knowledge, showing forgiveness, and kindness.

GENEROSITY

WRITING PROMPTS

1. What are some examples of generosity that involve money? Time? Talents or skills? Possessions?
2. Do you think it is harder to be generous with money rather than the other types of generosity (like time or talents)? Why?
3. If you had money to give away, what would you do with it?
4. What is the nicest thing someone has done for you or given you?
5. Would you rather someone give you their time, money, or possessions? Why?
6. If someone does not have the money or time to help someone else does this make them not generous? Why?
7. Should you share everything with others, or put limits to what you share? Explain.

GENEROSITY

SAMPLE ROLE PLAY SCENARIOS

1. Two students are sitting together at lunch. One student realizes they forgot their lunch. The other has a sandwich, fruit, and chips.
Student A ignores the problem and eats their own lunch. Student B offers to share half their sandwich. Student C offers to share snacks but keeps the main meal.
Discussion: How did generosity (or lack of it) affect the friendship? What's an easy way to be generous without going hungry yourself?
2. A group is working on a science project. One student struggles with drawing the diagram. Another student finishes their part early.
Student A says, "That's your problem, I'm done." Student B says, "I'll do it for you." Student C says, "I'll show you how I did mine and help you practice."
Discussion: Which choice shows generosity and builds skills? How can helping someone strengthen a team?
3. A student realizes they forgot a pencil for class. Another has a whole pack of pencils in their locker.
Student A says: "Too bad, you should be prepared." Student B: Give them a pencil but remind them it's borrowed. Student C: Give them a pencil and say, "No worries, I have plenty."
Discussion: When is it hard to share? Why does being generous with small things matter?

MORNING ANNOUNCEMENTS

Week 1: We are learning all about generosity. We defined generosity as being kind and giving to others. Some ways you can show generosity at school are sharing and lending items to classmates, showing a new classmate around the school, teaching a classmate something you know, giving a gift to a friend, be kind, and listen to a friend.

Week 2: We are continuing to learn all about generosity. Remember being generous means being kind and giving to others. Some ways that you can show generosity at home are helping out around the house, giving a gift to your family members, helping a sibling with homework, and going through your closet and donating items.

Week 3: We are continuing to learn all about generosity. Remember being generous is being kind and giving to others. Some ways that you can show generosity in your community is by giving to charity, donating items, volunteering, helping to clean up a neighbor's yard, walking a neighbor's dog for them, and holding a fundraiser.

Week 4: As we continue to learn about generosity, let's reflect on this quote by Margaret Cho, "Sometimes when we are generous in small barely detectable ways, it can change someone else's life forever." This means that when you are generous even in a small way, it can make a big difference in someone's life and in the world. What is one way you will show generosity today?

Week 5: Generosity is an essential trait to have for many careers. Social Workers for example show a lot of generosity. Social Workers help people cope with the challenges they are facing. These challenges include health care, mental health, financial concerns, and safety and wellbeing. Social workers advocate for assistance and resources for their clients. Having a passion for helping others is important because people who are experiencing a vulnerable time in their lives rely on social workers to connect them with resources and find solutions to problems. They use their skills and expertise to help create healthier families and communities. Think of a career you may be interested in and how you can show generosity within that career.

Week 6: Generosity is also shown by many leaders throughout history and is an important feature of being a leader. One such leader was Princess Diana, a member of the British Royal Family, married to the heir to the British Throne, Prince Charles. She was celebrated for her approach to charity work, helping children and the elderly. She also had a heavy involvement in helping AIDS patients, and worked with the Red Cross for the removal of landmines. Her compassion, personal warmth, humility, and accessibility earned her the nickname "The People's Princess." She showed us the importance of being a generous leader, she said "Anywhere I see suffering, that is where I want to be, doing what I can." Think about how you can be a leader in your classroom by showing generosity.

TOY DRIVE

During the holidays, the school holds a toy drive where students donate toys to the needy and to those who could not afford gifts for the holidays. Kayla has been saving up to get herself a new toy she really wants. After hearing about the toy drive, she realizes she has a lot of toys and wants to help those who don't have as many. She decides to use this month's allowance to go buy toys to donate to the toy drive. Then, she volunteers to help organize, wrap, and distribute the toys. It brings her joy to see other kids so happy.

Using Common Sense with Generosity

Being generous does not mean that you let others take advantage of you, it's important to use common sense when being generous. Set boundaries, say no if you need to, and recognize if your generosity is being appreciated or misused.

CAREERS WITH

GENEROSITY

SOCIAL WORKER

Social Workers help people cope with the challenges they are facing in their lives. These challenges include health care, mental health, financial concerns, and safety and wellbeing. They need to be great active listeners, have high communication and interpersonal skills. Social workers often advocate for appropriate assistance and resources for their clients. Having a passion for helping others is important because people who are experiencing the most vulnerable time in their lives rely on social workers to connect them with resources and find solutions to problems. They use their skills and expertise to help create healthier families and communities.

LEADERS WITH

GENEROUSITY

PRINCESS DIANA

Princess Diana was a member of the British Royal Family, married to the heir to the British Throne, Prince Charles. She was celebrated for her approach to charity work, helping children and the elderly. She also had a heavy involvement in helping AIDS patients and raising awareness and acceptance of AIDS, and worked with the International Red Cross for the removal of landmines. She also raised awareness and advocated ways to help people affected with cancer and mental illness. Her compassion, personal warmth, humility, and accessibility earned her the nickname "The People's Princess."

She showed us the importance of being a generous leader, she said

"Anywhere I see suffering, that is where I want to be, doing what I can."
