EMOTIONAL REGULATION

Session Objective:

- *Define emotional regulation in their own words.
- *Recognize physical and emotional warning signs.
- *Identify at least three healthy coping strategies.
- *Reflect on how to use regulation skills in daily life.

Materials:

- Handouts & PowerPoint
- Pencils

Guiding Questions:

- *When you get angry or frustrated, what does it feel like in your body?
- *What is one strategy you can try the next time you feel red light emotions?

Session Details

- *Have students answer the question of the day (page 32).
- *Present the PowerPoint, have students use the SketchNotes to take notes (page 31).
- *Say "Today we're going to talk about emotional regulation. That means noticing, understanding, and managing your emotions in a healthy way. Everyone feels big emotions—anger, stress, embarrassment, excitement—but what matters most is how we handle them." "Think about the last time you got really frustrated or upset. What did it feel like in your body? Did your heart race? Did your face get hot? Did your thoughts start spinning? These are called warning signs—your body's way of saying emotions are getting stronger." Ask: "Turn to a partner and share one warning sign you notice in yourself." (Let 2–3 students share aloud.)
- *Say "Each emotion has different physical and mental signals, or clues, that tell you that you are experiencing that emotion. Knowing you are experiencing that emotion, is the first step to being able to control your emotions." Go through the emotions pages 4-9.
- *"When emotions get strong, it can feel like a traffic light. Red = STOP. You're overwhelmed and need to pause. Yellow = SLOW DOWN. You feel emotions building—this is the perfect time to use a coping tool. Green = GO. You're calm, focused, and ready to make good choices. Your goal isn't to stay green all the time—it's to notice where you are and choose the right tool to help yourself." Complete pages 20-25.
- *Say "Just like a toolbox has hammers and screwdrivers for fixing things, you need a toolbox for handling emotions. Let's build yours." Complete pages 13-19.
- *Additional activities: True and False (pages 28-30), Writing prompts (pages 10-11), Read and Respond (pages 26-27), Task Cards (p.33-36).
- *Have students complete the exit ticket (page 32).

ASCA Standards Alignment:

- *Mindset: Belief in development of whole self, including a healthy balance of mental, social/emotional and physical well-being. (M 1)
- *Behavior: Self-Management Skills: Effective coping skills. (B-SMS 7)

SEL Competencies:

- *Self-Awareness: Identifying Emotions, Accurate Self-perception.
- *Self-Management: Stress Management.
- *Responsible Decision-Making: Identifying problems, Analyzing situations, Solving Problems.

Stoplight of Emotions

Red Light: Stop!

What it means: You're overwhelmed. Your emotions are in control, and it's hard to think clearly.

How it feels: Heart racing, fists clenched, tears forming, yelling, slamming doors.

Examples: Yelling at a friend who teases you. Slamming your laptop shut after getting a bad grade. Storming out of the classroom when frustrated.

What to do: Pause. Take a breath. Step away if needed. Use a calming strategy.

Yellow Light: Slow Down

What it means: You feel your emotions building, but you're not out of control yet. You have a choice.

How it feels: Nervous, tense, irritated, tapping your pencil, raising your voice.

Examples: Feeling annoyed when your group isn't listening. Getting frustrated when your sibling takes your stuff. Butterflies before presenting.

What to do: Notice your warning signs. Use a coping tool (deep breathing, positive self-talk, ask for help).

Green Light: Go

What it means: You're calm, focused, and ready to learn or interact in positive ways.

How it feels: Relaxed, confident, steady, in control of your actions.

Examples: Working with a partner and sharing ideas respectfully. Taking a deep breath before speaking in class. Smiling and saying "Good game" after a basketball loss.

What to do: Keep practicing healthy habits that keep you in the green zone.

EMOTIONAL REGULATION

Mei was walking into science class when he overheard two classmates laughing. One of them whispered, "Mei is always so slow at experiments." At first, Mei felt her face get hot and her fists clench. Her heart started to beat fast. She wanted to yell back or slam books on the table. But then she remembered what her counselor taught her about emotional regulation. She took a deep breath, counted slowly to five, and said to herself, "I can stay calm. I don't have to let their words control me." Instead of snapping, she sat down and focused on setting up her materials. During class, she raised his hand, shared his answers, and even got a compliment from the teacher for his careful work. Later, Mei thought about how she almost lost her cool. She felt proud that she had managed her emotions, and she realized something important: staying calm gave her the power, not the kids who made fun of her.

EMOTIONAL REGULATION

Kyle was excited when his teacher announced a group project in history class. He liked working with his friends—until he realized one of his group members, Jordan, wasn't helping at all. He scrolled on his phone while everyone else worked. Kyle felt his chest tighten. His face grew hot, and he could hear the thought in his head: "This is so unfair! I should just yell at him!" But then he paused. Kyle remembered what his counselor taught about emotional regulation: stop, breathe, and choose. He took a slow breath in, let it out, and told himself, "I can handle this without blowing up." Instead of yelling, Kyle calmly said, "Jordan, can you look up the facts we need? We'll finish faster if we all do a piece." Jordan shrugged, but he opened his laptop and started working. Kyle felt proud. He realized that by managing his emotions, he helped his group move forward without a fight.
